The movement to use PIV-I

Citi Transaction Services

David Belchick

25 April 2012

Use Case: Joint Personnel Adjudication System (JPAS)

Summary

- JPAS was enabled for Government Issued Credentials by DoD
- In late 2011, Citi tested its PIV-I certificates with DMDC
 - Process took a couple of weeks
 - 5 technical emails & 2 phone calls

Conclusions

- End users saw value in obtaining credentials for Logical AND Physical Access over a single purpose logical access credential
- Adding PIV-I to a PIV enabled application was not onerous
- Agencies reduce operations and administration of infrastructure cost by including PIV-I in addition to PIV when making PIV infrastructure upgrades in both logical and facilities access applications.
- Opened up commercial opportunities using interoperable technology and improves the overall security ecosystem

Use Case: Energy Company

Summary

- Citi client evaluating their credentialing posture
 - Logical Access
 - Physical Access
 - Reduce the number of cards for Regulatory compliance
 - Once notified by US Government facilities, plan to carry Citi IdentityPlus for facility access
 - Transportation Worker's Identification Credential
 - Others

Conclusions

- See value in the PIV-I concept
- Appear to be gaps in the harmonization of US Government policy and screening that need to be addressed before implementation can be considered

In January 2007, Citi released a Climate Change Position Statement, the first US financial institution to do so. As a sustainability leader in the financial sector, Citi has taken concrete steps to address this important issue of climate change by: (a) targeting $50 billion over 10 years to address global climate change: includes significant increases in investment and financing of alternative energy, clean technology, and other carbon-emission reduction activities; (b) committing to reduce GHG emissions of all Citi owned and leased properties around the world by 10% by 2011; (c) purchasing more than 52,000 MWh of green (carbon neutral) power for our operations in 2006; (d) creating Sustainable Development Investments (SDI) that makes private equity investments in renewable energy and clean technologies; (e) providing lending and investing services to clients for renewable energy development and projects; (f) producing equity research related to climate issues that helps to inform investors on risks and opportunities associated with the issue; and (g) engaging with a broad range of stakeholders on the issue of climate change to help advance understanding and solutions.

Citi works with its clients in greenhouse gas intensive industries to evaluate emerging risks from climate change and, where appropriate, to mitigate those risks.
